MEDIA ALERT

“Malloween” at Desert Ridge Marketplace gives families a safe, fun place to trick or treat
Up to 5,000 costumed children expected at annual Halloween celebration, Oct. 31

What: Calling all pint-sized witches, ghosts and pumpkins – Desert Ridge Marketplace is hosting a “Malloween” event to give Valley families a fun and safe alternative to traditional door-to-door trick-or-treating. The event provides a not-so-spooky, little-bit-kooky Halloween experience, especially for younger trick-or-treaters.

With store-to-store trick-or-treating, Halloween music and plenty of prizes, along with a variety of games and activities coordinated by family entertainment company, Funergy, “Malloween” is expected to draw up to 5,000 costumed children to the District. In addition to candy, participating stores, indicated by a balloon column outside their doors, will provide select giveaways.

When: 3 p.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 31, 2015

Where: Desert Ridge Marketplace – The District Stage
21001 N Tatum Blvd., Phoenix

Why: According to a recent survey by the National Retail Federation, more than 157 million Americans will celebrate Halloween this year. With Halloween fever hotter than ever, growing numbers of families are looking for alternatives to traditional trick-or-treating excursions after nightfall. Desert Ridge Marketplace’s “Malloween” is the perfect option for families with young children looking to participate in Halloween traditions in a safe, secure environment.

Visuals: The late afternoon event will bring:

- 4,500-5,000 dressed-up trick-or-treaters and their families to The District;
- Candy, candy and more candy; and
- Prizes and giveaways.
